Unit-III

3. Make a precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title to it: [10]

Nearly everyone enjoys birds : the beauty of their forms and colouring, the liveliness of their movements, the quickness of their flight and the sweetness of their songs. It is precisely on this account that as a pursuit for the out-of-doors, bird watching tends to be in a class by itself. Its strong point is that it can be indulged in with pleasure and profit not only by the man who studies birds scientifically, but also by one possessing no specialized knowledge. The latter; moreover is also enabled to share his profit with the scientist who for certain aspects of bird study has to depend entirely upon data collected by the intelligent watcher.

Unit-IV

4.(A) Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below: [5]

In 1940, the news of the power of Penicillin burst upon the world. Fleming became famous overnight and was regarded as one of the most distinguished scientist of his time. In 1944, he was honoured by King George VI with a Knighthood and became Sir Alexander Fleming. The next year he and his fellow bacteriologists, whose combined efforts led to the great discovery, were honoured with joint Nobel Prize. On receiving this great honour Fleming said in his usual modest way, "Wherever I go people thank me for saving their lives, I didn't do anything. I just found a remedy that was there."
